Any parent who has ever driven a crying baby around the block to get them to sleep will just about fall over with joy at a new Australian invention designed to achieve the same result - minus the hassle. The award-winning Lullabub is a remote-controlled rocker that sits under each foot of the cot and lulls your baby to sleep in whichever way works best for them: heartbeat, driving motion, womb simulation or - for very fabulous babes who can't sleep anywhere other than Daddy's 80-footer - sailing motion. If only they made them in king size...
